Forecast For Southwest England
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 1600 on Wednesday 27 Jan 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Some heavy rain overnight. Very mild tomorrow.

This Evening and Tonight:
A wet start for many as a band of rain pushes across the region, bringing heavy downpours in some areas and clearing for most by dawn. Turning windy and remaining mild through the night. Minimum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Thursday:
Any early rain soon clearing to leave a dry day with sunny spells, before another band of rain arrives in the evening. Becoming very mild in many areas. Maximum temperature 14 deg C (57 deg F).

Outlook for Friday to Sunday:
A wet and windy start on Friday, but turning drier later. Outbreaks of rain on Saturday with possible coastal gales. Further rain on Sunday, after a frosty start.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.